REPORT OF SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

The Superintendent of schools makes to his townsmen the following report of the condition of the schools during the year now closing.

DISTRICT NO. 1.

In summer this school was under the care of the same teacher as last year, and the general good order and faithful instruction then distinctly noticed, were fully sustained. There was a smaller attendance than usual during a part of the season. The winter school was crowded with pupils from first to last, and was of marked excellence.

DISTRICT NO. 2.

Another year of success has been given to this school. Both the teachers acquitted themselves with honor. The scholars were orderly and studious. Several of the more advanced pupils left school before the winter examination to join their classes in the Academy.

DISTRICT NO. 3.

The young lady in charge of this school began her work as a teacher during this year. She proved herself to be able and apt to teach. The scholars, though few in number, made fair progress.

DISTRICT NO. 4.

The committee of this district wisely chose one of our most approved teachers to take charge of the school for both terms. The school was shorter than if a second or third class teacher had been employed, but it was far more profitable. The discipline was worthy of all praise.

DISTRICT NO. 5.

This school in summer opened favorably, but was somewhat interrupted by the teacher's illness. The winter term was one of special interest. This school stands first on our list for regular and punctual attendance.

DISTRICT NO. 6.

The school term in this district was shorter than is desirable, though several families sent pupils in part to other schools; but while it lasted, the scholars worked like bees, under the inspiring guidance of their beloved teacher. Music and compositions, along with the ordinary exercises, graced the close of the school.

DISTRICT NO. 7.

By some mistake the committee was not duly apprised of the close of the summer term, and therefore cannot speak of the appearance of the school at that time. Both teacher and scholars promised well at the beginning of the school. For the winter, an instructor of ripe age and experience was chosen, under whose care some of the methods of former years were put in practice. The closing exhibition of the school was fair and pleasant.

DISTRICT NO. 8.

In this district special care was taken to secure tried teachers. Both labored faithfully. The examinations were thorough and satisfactory. It is pleasant to see this school, so large in former years, filling up again.

DISTRICT NO. 9.

The teacher of this school began her professional course this year. Order, clearness, and strength appeared in the arrangement and exercises of the school. The school-room has been decidedly improved.

DISTRICT NO. 10.

The scholars of this district, as for two years past, have gone to district No. 9, in Londonderry.

DISTRICT NO. 11.

The teacher of this school speaks of being annoyed by the ill conduct of a few pupils the first part of the term. Later in the season, several of the families left town, and sickness thinned the school. The pupils that appeared at the examination, recited creditably. The teacher's report was a model one.

DISTRICT NO. 12.

This small school holds on its way like a little Monitor, rising in character from year to year. Both teacher and pupils deserve approval. Two private schools were epened later, patronized in part from other districts, and from out of town.

In the schools of our fathers, in our existing schools, we find much to approve and rejoice in. Their fruits demonstrate that they are of a good type. Out of these nurseries have gone forth men and women who have been like trees planted in the courts of the Lord. But it must force itself on every thoughtful, observant person, that we are not to rest in the past in this regard, but are to be constantly moving forward. We attain perfection here in no one thing. It is alike our duty and interest to be ever striving for it, ever approaching that grand ideal. We are in an age in which there is a wonderful awakening of mind and heart in almost every direction, in respect to almost every worthy object, In every branch of human industry, in every department of science and art. there is attention, study, energy, life. While everything is thus advancing, like the glorious orbs in the heavens, a demand is made upon us to put forth new efforts in the cause of early education, that the training of the young may keep pace with the march of improvement in other things. In order to proceed intelligently, so as not to waste any strength, let us endeavor to fix in our minds a true conception of what we need in our schools that we may reach the best results in this field. At the foundation of the whole enterprise lies a profound interest in the community in this object. No two or three individuals, however disposed or gifted, can do the work. The many, not the few, must be enlisted in it.-The people must not passively accept the institution, but must cherish a living interest in it. It is not a hard task for any true mind to bring itself into deep sympathy with this vital movement. It is the beginning of a training for the great work of life. foundations are laying for all after years. The feeling aroused or chilled, the energy cooled, or the sloth fostered, the thoroughness or superficiality practised, are as seed sown for a future harvest. reach on in their effects through all coming life. If the habits of order, of earnest study, of thorough understanding and execution here formed and strengthened, are what they should be, the entire succeeding life will be shaped and inspired by them. The pupils will become a law to themselves. They will surely attain an honorable eminence. If it be otherwise, the whole of the years to come will be shaded and blighted thereby. Any parent, any lover of his kind, who will duly reflect on this subject, cannot fail of being strongly impressed by a sense of its importance. He will be ready to bear his part in the labor and expense that are required to make the school what it should be. His home will breathe a spirit of sympathy with the school, with the teacher, and especially with any of the pupils who are under his personal care. Every facility in his power will be afforded such to aid them in their studies. He will not hesitate, if need be, to buckle on the armor of former years, like aged Priam, and to become a student again with his children or wards. He will see to it that they attend school constantly and punctually. Not his heart only, but his presence, from time to time, will be in the schoolroom. In the studies and discipline of the school, he will confer with and sustain the teacher. If any mistake is made, or misunderstanding occurs—for who is perfect?—he will follow the Bible rule, and first of all, consult the head of the school, seeking in the spirit of good will, any explanation or desired change.

Pass we now to the schoolroom. This should be sufficiently spacious for the number of pupils; it should be well ventilated, well furnished, and well warmed in winter, and be kept in perfect repair. No broken windows, chairs, or desks should be seen. Whatever maps, or other works of reference are necessary, should be supplied. The school edifice, thus constructed and furnished, is to be put into the hands of the teacher, who is to see that it is kept neat and uninjured. No hacking of desks or seats, no scattering about of pieces of paper, or of food, or of any thing of the kind, is to be tolerated. System, order, are to reign within and around the schoolhouse. The pupils of every age are to be taught to control their lips, and feet, and bodies, to handle their books, and maps, and slates with great carefulness, so as to create no disturbance.— They are to attend to their studies, and not to the other pupils, or to visitors, or to travellers in the street. Before school, at recess, and when dismissed at noon or night, no tumult whatever is to be allowed. Good order is to be secured as the prime requisite to a good school.

In the branches of study taught, thoroughness is to be constantly aimed at. Not the ground gone over is to be the standard, but the ability of the scholar to tell what he has learned, and to give the reasons of things. The principles and rules should be repeated till they are a part of the pupil's inalienable treasures; the processes are to be gone over till the mind is entirely at home with them. The scholar is to be made to understand perfectly the meaning of terms, and the nature of operations, till he can be a guide to others in these; till in reading, for example, he can take new passages, and read them aright, and give the rules; or, in arithmetic, can take problems, not in the book, and solve them, and give the reason for each step. This mastery of subjects from the first may be slow at the outset, may require much care and toil, but it is the This is Primary Education as it should be. It only true course. pays in the end. Taking care of the pence in this manner, the pounds of after years will take care of themselves. Pupils thus educated become thinkers, scholars, men, in the best sense, able to expose shams, and to discern and advocate all right ways.

The Common School is the great institution for the training of the citizens of our Republic. No other influence reaches and moulds so many. Let it, then, be justly prized, generously supported, and steadily carried on towards perfection.
